When Neel Kashkari thought I was an expert, they paid me to advise them. About two weeks after I disagreed with the amendment, I got a note from the Federal Reserve that stated due to a misunderstanding, the three year contract I had signed was changed to a one year contract. This was legal, but wierd. I cannot prove any connection. See the attached email. I asked if I had been fired for my disagreement, they said no -- I asked if anyone else had been "term limited," they said, like their constitutional analysis, that was secret.
